A Niche Employment Law Practice

How it all began

The Firm was founded in 1994 at a time when Employment Law was fast developing, yet few legal practices saw it as a separate and specialist area of law. Frequently rolled in with general litigation or Company Law, many Firms simply did not have a Solicitor specifically trained in this complex field of Law. Consequently employers were not getting the level of legal expertise in Employment Law that they received in other aspects of their business. The Firm's objective was to provide just this specialist resource.

Bulfin & Co is now firmly established as a leading specialist Employment Law practice with a reputation for providing excellent service and a quality legal advice in all areas of employment law.

An Employment Law Resource for Employers

Employment is a complex and fast changing area of law. Because it affects real people in real situations and the penalties for failing to comply with the law are high, no employer can afford to be without some form of employment law resource for its organisation. However, we understand that employers' needs vary according to the size of their organization, the skills, experience and expertise of their managers and of course their budget. Therefore our employment law solutions are always tailored to our clients' exact requirements .

From Ad hoc to Consultancy

Our service to you is dictated by your needs. If you want a low cost solution under which you just call or email us when you need to, that is fine by us. You will still receive out full care and attention however infrequently you contact us and we will just bill you for the time spent at the hourly rate current at that time.

When clients need more than ad hoc services, we offer a range of packages to suit their individual needs all providing the benefits of an in - house service, without the permanent overhead.
